• Conclusion
Plagiarism

- Plagiarism is defined as presenting other people’s works as your own. The term plagiarism is derived from Latin plagiarius that means ‘kidnapper’.

- Thus for one to claim originality of other people’s works such as reports, publications, ideas, speeches, verses and stories is being dishonest.
  - It is common among students, researchers, writers, journalists and politicians.
  - The original work/source often exists and is retrievable.

- Failure to acknowledge sources of information used is what leads to plagiarism.

- Note those plagiarizing, are potential library users and fail to acknowledge resources found in or accessible through the library.

- Consequences to such actions can be serious and there is risk in their social, academic and professional reputation.

Plagiarism and Academic

• In higher education plagiarism happens when students, researchers and other scholars present research reports, papers, assignments as their own when it's not the case.

• Acknowledgment should be done whenever:
  • Directly quoting another person's actual words, whether oral or written;
  • Using another person's ideas, opinions, or theories;
  • Paraphrasing the words, ideas, opinions, or theories of others, whether oral or written;
  • Facts, statistics, or illustrative material borrowed from other sources.

• Libraries should conduct information literacy that cover referencing and citations,
Academic Integrity Issue

- Plagiarism is an academic integrity issue, a great concern and is considered an academic crime. Consequences can lead to:
  - Discontinuation of studies.
  - Withdraw of certificates awarded.
  - Conviction.
  - Surcharging.
  - Demotion or loss of job

German Education Minister Resignation: Plagiarism or Politics?

Posted by Jonathan Bailey on Feb 11, 2013 1:43:00 PM

It’s been another rough week for German Chancellor Angela Merkel. Annette Schavan, a member of Merkel’s cabinet and the Education Minister for the country, has resigned after her Ph.D was revoked following an investigation into her doctoral thesis that found evidence of plagiarism.

PM Victor Ponta renounces PhD, years after being involved in plagiarism scandal

Romanian Prime Minister Victor Ponta announced Tuesday that he will give up his PhD in Law, which he received in 2003 from the University of Bucharest, years after he was involved in a notorious plagiarism scandal.

“I am writing to you to notify you about my decision to renounce the title of ‘doctor in law’ awarded in 2003 by the University of Bucharest. This is a gesture I should have done a long time ago, since the moment the first public accusations about my doctorate thesis appeared”, Victor Ponta wrote in his letter to the University of Bucharest.

“I didn’t go through with it because I believed in good faith in my arguments at the time when my work was being contested and I didn’t want to mix up the professional aspect with the political,” Ponta said in his Facebook post announcing the decision.

The PM said that he plans to make a new doctoral attempt, after his political career will be over, and that he will respect all standards and requirements valid at the corresponding time.

PETALING JAYA, MALAYSIA: A stern warning will be given to two Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM) lecturers for plagiarising materials from the Internet to produce a guide book.

UPM vice-chancellor Prof Datuk Dr Nik Mustapha R. Abdullah said this warning would also be included in their service records, which would affect their promotion.

Prof Dr Nik Mustapha said the legal department had made suggestions to the management on the disciplinary action to be taken after personally meeting the authors.

"The junior author, who recently completed her PhD, said that since the source was from the Internet, she thought the information was in the public domain and as such did not cite the article," he said.

Prof Dr Nik Mustapha said the senior author admitted to the legal team that the manuscript looked all right to him, not realising that it was taken from another work.

"Since this is a guide book, we decided that the punishment was reasonable," he said.

Prof Dr Nik Mustapha said that the two authors have apologised for their ignorance, adding that the plagiarism did not affect UPM undergraduates as the work was not a textbook.
• In 2016, part of Melania Trump speech appeared to have been lifted from Michelle Obama’s 2008 speech.
• Nigerian president, Mr Buhari’s, acceptance speech in 2016 had statements plagiarized from former US president Barrack Obama.
• Also, Ghana President acceptance speech plagiarized
Why Plagiarize

- Laziness.
- Stress for time.
- Lack of skills on referencing and citation.
- Ignorance: because they don't know that plagiarism is wrong.
- Easy access to internet/electronic resources making it easy to copy and paste.
- Commercial bureaus that tempt students to pay for reports.
Avoiding Plagiarism

• When using direct words, quotes and phrases
  • Reproduce the text exactly.
  • Credit the sources by citing appropriately.

• Any ideas or materials taken from another source for either written or oral use must be fully acknowledged, unless the information is common knowledge.
  • Does not apply to those ideas which are generally and freely circulated in the public domain.

• Libraries should make it easy for users to locate information.
Useful Software

- Anti-Plagiarism / Text Similarity Check Software
  - Turnitin
  - Grammarly

- Reference and Citation Management
  - Mendeley
  - Zotero

- Librarians should learn these kind of software, train users and ensure they are used.
